Decrease on Illegal export of raw herbs of essential oils

ANSAB study, which was sponsored by FRAME, a program of USAID, surveyed actors throughout the Jatamansi and Wintergreen value chains, in representative production, trade and processing areas of Nepal. The study mapped the nature, wealth and power dynamics of the essential oils sector in Nepal using Jatamansi and Wintergreen as example products within the product class of essential oils and the larger sector of natural products. Jatamansi and Wintergreen provided a contrast in export and domestically consumed natural products and demonstrated that there is potential for essential oils in both markets. Raw Jatamansi and oil are export products for Nepal. The value chain dynamics have changed significantly in the last decade from over 90% traded illegally in raw form to India, to 75% processed into essential oil in Nepal. Wintergreen is processed 100% in Nepal with 90% of the oil sold on the domestic market.

Jatamansi and Wintergreen are aromatic natural products that are processed into essential oils for perfumes, personal care, and medicines.

Trend analysis- Timur

The market trend of Timur remained constant in 2001-2003 in Nepal and India markets. During 2001 and 2002 the average price of Timur is NRs 82/Kg, and 87/Kg respectively in Nepalgunj markets. The average price in 2003 and 2004 touched NRs 111/Kg, and 123/Kg in Nepalgunj. The average price difference between Nepalgunj and Delhi market was NRs 7-17 /Kg during this period.
